This is the tutorial I will be showing you how to make your own exquisite emoji image or artwork. Step 1: Download Photoshop Elements. Make sure to get a version that has the option for Sepia Tone and High Contrast for this tutorial. Step 2: Grab your emoji that you want to transform. For this tutorial, I have used a heart with a rose emoji and then I will edit it to make it realistic. We will still be making this cute emoji picture but we will be in the process of making it look like a real rose. Step 3: Go to File-> Open... Step 4: You will now be taken to a file list. Browse to where you have the image you need. As you can see here, I have put the rose emoji image. Step 5: Here is where you will need to make sure to change the image types. For this, the new image type that I want for my rose is.eps. That means that it's basically a vector image. And then the old image format that I want to keep is.psd, which is a layered Photoshop file. Step 6: Click OK Step 7: As you can see here, I'm going to open it up and put a layer over it. With this, I have just made a flower. Step 8: Open Photoshop Elements and drag your Image into it. So I have just made the rose, now we need to add another one so we just open Photoshop Elements and drag the rose back in. And when you do that you'll be able to see a new layer on top of the initial rose layer. Step 9: Select Layer-> New Layer. Step 10: This opens up a whole new layer, and we can now edit it separately. Now we have these new layers, go to Edit-> Paths -> Stroke. Step 11: This will create a stroke layer around your flower, making it look like it is real. Step 12: Now we need to edit the color of the flower. In this example, I'm going to go up in the color picker. It is important that you are looking at what the color is in reality. You can adjust things like the hue and saturation, but in this case, let's just edit the RGB values directly. You'll know what 05a79cecff

Larry tells hilarious stories of his failed attempts to buy presents for his family, and the terrible advice he was given for Christmas presents. Unfortunately, for Larry, his family chose the best Christmas present ever, and gave him a party bus, complete with a party host and a band. At the party, Larry wonders why he's still getting nothing for Christmas, and finds out that it's all because of his sleazy relatives. Larry then asks his uncle for advice on Christmas presents, and winds up thinking his Uncle Idiocy agrees with his parents. Larry's parents were planning to fly to Japan to visit his... A clinimetric study of the Fatigue Impact Scale with cancer patients. Because fatigue is such a common and debilitating symptom of cancer and other diseases, there is a great need for reliable and valid instruments that can be used in health care research. This study was designed to (a) evaluate the psychometric properties of the Fatigue Impact Scale (FIS) in a sample of cancer patients and (b) examine the extent to which selected psychosocial factors, such as mood and health status, and demographic information accounted for variance in FIS scores. The FIS was administered by mail to 502 cancer patients over a seven-month period, and 364 returned complete questionnaires (response rate, 71%). Demographic data indicated that most patients were female (84%), married (61%), and had between two and four children (49%). Item response theory analyses indicated that the FIS possessed a satisfactory level of internal consistency and a sufficient range of item functioning for use in both group and individual testing. Patient-selected demographic, clinical, and psychosocial variables explained 28% of the variance in the FIS, with pain and overall health status ratings accounting for a significant amount of additional variance. The results of this study suggest that the FIS is a reliable and valid measure for assessing cancer-related fatigue. Its brevity and ease of use make it a potentially useful instrument for research in the field of oncology. In this graphic, we see what a
